Suspect tags 3 in beheading

 By Tina G. Santos
 and Lela B. Salaverria

RUMOR JIMBLA, A SUSPECT IN the July 18 Basilan ambush of a Filipino contingent, has turned at least three members of the Abu Sayyaf extremist group to strong those responsible for the beheading of 10 of the 14 Marines who were killed during the ambush, according to the National Bureau of Investigation.

Jimblal surrendered to a GMA-7 news crew on Thursday and was later arrested by the NBI. He is one of 127 suspects being sought for the killing and beheading of the Marines.

Jimblal, 35, told the NBI that during a conversation with an ASG group led by Pangil Jimblal, ASG members

Omair Jimblal had revealed to him that he intended first of the main strategy while another member, dating Jimblal, confided that he also had the finger of a slain Marine soldier to get a tag.

A former head of ASG also admitted that he studied the identities of one of the slain Marines as an act of revenge for the death of his cousin, Pangil Jimblal, who was killed by US forces in the Marawi area last May. Jimblal said he had a statement on the "file."

Jimblal said he surrendered to authorities because he wanted to prove that he did not participate in the beheadings.

Lupat Rod Jimblal, regional director southeast of the NBI National Capital Region, said Jimblal's "extra judicial confession" will further strengthen the evidence that the government had gathered against those responsible for the beheading of the slain Marines.

"This is an insider's view of what happened during the ambush. This might even encourage other suspects to surrender," Jimblal's lawyers said.

Though he doesn't suspect Jimblal as a "valuable person," Justice Secretary Rod Francisco said the Department of Justice would still have to evaluate his fitness to be a main witness.

Jimblal will be subjected to "factual investigation" to get more information about the July 18 ambush.

Committee said additional evidence would have to be gathered to know whether authorities could use Jimblal to get down the others involved in the ambush.

Int'l teachers groups seek end to RP killings

by RICHARD BARRY PETER

Representing at least 200 teacher organizations in 70 countries, teachers' groups called on President Manzano-Santos to immediately put a stop to the unprovoked killings and involuntary disappearances in the Philippines.

Paul van Loenen, secretary general of Education International (IE), conveyed the message in Manila to leaders of the country.

The IE group came 30 with 100 education workers globally, including those belonging to Manila-affiliated organizations like the National Alliance of Concurrent Teachers of ATE, National Alliance of Teachers and Office Workers, Philippine Public School Teachers' Association, Teachers Organization of the Philippines, Public Sector and the Teacher Federation YEM Federation of Free Workers.

Van Loenen expressed concern over the allegedly widespread attacks and human rights violations in the Philippines, saying "It is appalling to know that more than 1,000 teachers fighting to uphold the rights and welfare of Filipinos have been assassinated or made to disappear since 2001."

He also noted that at least 100 Filipino teachers were among the victims of extrajudicial violence last.

"Education workers throughout the world monitor the situation, who have fallen victim to violence against trade unionists," said Van Loenen.

He also deplored the "growing sense of impunity" due to the failure to prosecute and identify the perpetrators. Jerry B. Espinosa Caraga, Juan Limones, Jose M. Del, Leticia Pata, President, Philippine Teachers' Association, Rodrigo Carayon, and Wanda Garmen, said Van Loenen.

RP caregivers to benefit from new UK policy

By Jerome Baring

THE UNITED KINGDOM HAS APPROVED its policy of not granting citizenship to the first-year work permit holders to foreign caregivers.

The policy change will benefit 25,000 Filipino caregivers in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, and Unimanned Gambia, a recruitment industry consultant for several local agencies.

With the issuance and publication of the new policy guidelines within the month, applications for citizenship would now be held open, he said.

Intending the caregivers' work permit will also mean that their employers will have to meet the new annual salary rate of £14,000 or the hourly rate of £7.82, said Gambia.

According to Gambia, the change in policy was initiated by Martin Green, the chief executive officer of the English Community Care Association.

Green is in contact with the British government, including the Ministry for Health and Home and the Border and Immigration Agency (BIA), he said.

The BIA initiated the non-citizenship policy after talks between the health and home ministries, Gambia said.

Deportation

Some organizations and employers of the Filipinos in the UK have been taking members of parliament for a revision of the policy, saying it was detrimental to the UK's economy.

Gambia said the organizations of Filipino caregivers, who are still in Manila, for non-work permits would still be dealt with on a "case-by-case basis," meaning that the organizations helping them will have to prove that they have a reasonable need for caregivers and can comply with the new requirements.

"The intention is not to stop well-qualified health-care staff entering the UK but to ensure that they are employed properly, by and maintaining the official status of a caregiver," Gambia said.

He said the new policy may be for Filipinos as they were well-qualified, able to speak good English and therefore have a greater opportunity to be admitted for work in the UK, he said.

Core lessons in the UK wanted to see the Filipino caregivers in 2006. Twenty percent of the 25,000 Filipino caregivers in the UK work in households of primarily non-care workers, while the remaining 30 percent are with the National Health Service.

Filipinos are well-trained and supported for their work, working very hard and English speaking, an advantage over workers from the new European Union member states," Gambia said.

Mid-level PNP revamp ongoing

By Eliza Puga

THE PHILIPPINE NATIONAL POLICE (PNP) leadership shifted its middle-level positions yesterday in line with its antiracket program that promises sweeping changes in the 115,000-strong national police force. It was the antiracket program of Director General Alan Villarosa that resulted in the reshuffle. He is replaced by Director General Bernal.

Head of the Directorate for Investigation and Security Management is Danilo. Villarosa is also head of Task Force Giga, a special unit tasked to investigate the killings of the military and journalists.

Replacing Villarosa is the OIC of the Anti-Racket Task Force, Bernal. Villarosa is also head of the PNP's Human Rights Unit.

More movements within the PNP leadership are forthcoming with the retirement of Deputy Director General Antonio Illana, Deputy Chief for Operations, on Aug. 22.

Director General Bernal, at present the Chief of the Department, has been accompanied by Director General Oscar Calabiao, PNP chief, to replace Villarosa.

Antiracket program

Calabiao, also recommended Director General Bernal, that of the Directorate for Inter-Community Relations, complete Villarosa.

Meanwhile, the PNP's antiracket program will be in full swing soon, documents submitted by the Inspector General.

According to a memo submitted by the PNP to the National Police Commission (NAPC) last week, there are four categories of antiracket.

First, the program will put a cap on the number of police officers who will hold any position. The limit is mandated to stay at its position for a maximum of four years. Six years is the maximum for regional directors and nine years for provincial commanders. The officer can retire earlier if the number of the mandatory retirement age is 30.

Second, a police officer relieved from his position with this case and still has not been given a new assignment for two years will be retired as required.

Third, any officer who is given a position lower than what is adequate by the rank, could not be appointed to a position commensurate to his rank for 18 months will also be required.

Finally, any officer who has been promoted in the last 10 years will also be required to retire by the rank.

Guimarasns still ask: Where are the fish?

2006, spilling almost 2 million liters of bunker fuel into the sea and triggering one of the country's worst environmental disasters.

Villagracia family and 300 other residents of Barangay Talsi in Nueva Valencia town were forced to leave their homes in September last year after health officials warned them of various health risks.

Along with her wife Margie and their six children, aged 3 to 18, Villagracia moved nearly two months to tents in an evacuation center.

They have gone back to their home in Talsi despite bad life but has gone back to normal for them.

"It's like a bad dream that still doesn't want to go away," Villagracia told the Inquirer.

He said he had gone back fishing since November last year, but like thousands of other residents affected by the oil spill he still feels from the loss of livelihood and damage to the atoll's rich natural resources.

From 1 kilo to 5 pieces

Fish catch has not returned to pre-oil spill levels.

"I used to get three kilos of shrimp before. Now it's just five pieces," Villagracia said.

His wife Margie has started working as a housekeeper to help sustain their family.

The International Oil Pollution Compensation Fund (IOPCF), a London-based international agency that indemnifies oil spill victims, gave Villagracia P12,000 as compensation for pollution damages. But he said this was hardly enough to pay debts incurred during the months he was unable to fish.

Nueva Valencia Mayor Alejandro Aranao said residents needed continued support, especially for livelihood.

Aranao said the rejection of most of the second batch of Guimaras claimants by the IOPCF had dampened the hopes of many residents to get compensation for losses resulting from the spill.

Additional claimants

The IOPCF has paid P500.2 million to 22,444 claimants (P131 million to 12,322 claimants in Guimaras and P36,907,752 to 12,322 claimants in Talsi) for economic damages, according to a report of the IOPCF available on its website June 12, 2007.

But the IOPCF report said it would "likely reject" part, if not all, of the 132,000 additional claimants in Guimaras.

EXACTLY THEIR SENTIMENT: The bats of the oil spill affected residents of Barangay La Paz, Nueva Valencia, in southern Guimaras is pulled on a banca. La Paz was one of the coastal villages hardest hit by the oil that leaked from the Petrobrás oil tanker MT Exxon Valdez that sank on Aug. 11.

It noted that the number of claimants, combined with the number of claimants that had previously submitted claims, represented about 80 percent of the population of Guimaras.

"The disparity of the claims registration forms were incomplete and a significant number were from people under the age of 18 years, the minimum age in which people are allowed to engage in fishing," the report said.

Reasons for rejection

Chiefly Guimaras provincial economic and development officer said rejection by IOPCF of the overwhelming number of second batch claimants had also allowed legitimate claimants who have in means of recovering their livelihood.

Guimaras said that out of the 122,804 claimants for the second batch, only 130 had been considered for payment by the IOPCF.

The loss were rejected for various reasons, such as that the claimants were below 18 years old, non-residents of Guimaras, used fictitious names or were not engaged in fishing activities.

The IOPCF has still to settle the claims of around 1,000 other Guimaras from Guimaras who have signed a Manila-based law firm to claim compensation including PGM, Inc.

The fund said that among the 1,000 claimants, it had already settled the claims of around 100 residents which another 130 had received settlement offers. The remaining 431 claimants need to submit further documentary evidence to establish they were bona fide fishermen and they suffered pollution damage.

The IOPCF has also compensated 68 trout farmers for a total of P1,307,775. It is still assessing 177 claims in the tourism sector, mainly those centers of small houses and tent bed operations, for a total of P147,677,105.

Another 17 owners of beach properties have claimed compensation totaling P1,771,597 for damages and loss of land from their property due to the cleanup operations.

The IOPCF is also assessing the claims of 407 seaweed farmers amounting to P12,265,326 and of 213 fishpond operators amounting to P140,200,220.

Coast Guard, too

It also has not issued payments for the claims of the Philippine Coast Guard for P49,606,325 for expenses incurred while responding to the oil spill.

The fund has paid an initial P1.7 million out of the total P4.5 million in firm contributions involved in the offshore cleanup and P5,819,736 for the oil removal operations from the tanker tanker.

It has also reimbursed Steno Corp. P134 million for the costs of shoreline cleanup.

The IOPCF is still assessing the proposal of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources to conduct post-spill studies and the rehabilitation of coastal natural resources, generatively mangroves, costing P130 million.

It also has yet to decide on the claims of local government units in the towns of San Lorenzo, Silang and Nueva Valencia for P14,063,892 to pay for costs and salaries of the municipal staff who responded to the incident.

Economic, tourism slump

But even with IOPCF compensation, Guimarasians are struggling to cope with the impact of the disaster on their economy.

Tourism, a pillar of the local economy, has changed despite a campaign to revive the negative impact of the disaster.

Hotel arrivals were down from 98,873 in 2005 to 174,985 last year, based on data from the provincial tourism office.

Guimaras said the decrease in tourism was still uncertain because the tourism figures for last year included thousands of volunteers, scouts, researchers and other personnel

Petron to help establish fish cages to rebuild lives

PETRON SAID YESTERDAY IT WOULD REBUILD fishing fish cages in Cebu to help rebuild the lives of residents affected by last year's destruction of typh.

In a statement, Petron said it had signed a memorandum of agreement with the Southeast Asian Fisheries Development Center (SEAFDEC) for the provision of seed capital for the establishment of a sustainable marine aquaculture farm that would initially benefit fishermen by using Magsaysay Foundation and Petron.

This will involve the establishment of three fish cages—two to be built by Petron and Sulpicio—and one to be worked with Sulpicio.

Several fishermen, along with Sulpicio, will also receive training on the construction and maintenance of fish cages, stocking of fingerlings, feeding, harvesting and packaging of the fish for shipment, Petron said.

The Philippine Fisheries for Rural Program will facilitate the training.

The foreigner trainers will then construct the third fish cage, meaning they have learned well enough to apply theories to actual practice.

Petron Foundation executive director Mike Iral said the company would ensure that the fishery farming program would be sustainable.

"The establishment of this sustainable farm in Cebu will ensure we are able to provide a stable, long-term traditional sustenance that will directly benefit fishermen. This will provide a more reliable source of income while preserving the environment," he said.

The five-month project is expected to take place between December and January 2008.

Petron said it had also partnered with the Department of Social Welfare and Development to implement a second learning program in the municipality of Sibuyan.

The program is open to Sulu and Sabah fishermen as well.

In June, 11 Self-Employment Assistance Beneficiaries Association have received between P300,000 and P150,000 in seed money for the program, according to Petron.

Petron said it was also spearheading education-related initiatives for the children in Cebu.

The old fish is recently inaugurated two educational facilities on the island—the Petron School in Marikina and the Petron School in Marikina.

Petron has also started work on providing the 17 public high schools in Marikina with water supply.

First, the Senate hearings of a company that carried huge debts ($50, $60 billion) had now grown into a 100% "Pledge" case, regardless of the possible bankruptcy and large savings opportunities. As a corporation, the past a huge number of bankruptcies, 200 billion up to an equally formidable service provider, but not.

That is all efficient but just begs the question: why David? VP Operations/General Manager Henry says: "I've administered 10 years ago, years more than that and we still run that a minute or two behind." That is his impression that David adds "the extra bit" that he considers essential and irreplaceable."

Added: "I'd hope 2011 Express when I return is coordinating with our 2011 business objectives. Good sign. When there are changes in priorities, we need to adjust our priorities. Beauty from deep within.

Peñon continues its commitment to ensure a world of blue waters, clear skies and a healthy environment. Take the Tablasara Reef for instance, a marine park beyond compare, the Tablasara Reef is located in the municipality of Cagayanville, Palawan, right at the heart of Sulu Sea. It stands out as the only UNESCO World Heritage Site in the seas of Southeast Asia and is recognized as one of the country's best-managed protected areas.

Together with WWF, the global conservation organization, we are helping in the conservation and protection of this unique natural treasure. Through the comprehensive Life and Livelihoods Sustaining the Tablasara and the Sea program that promotes the development of sustainable livelihoods for residents, such as ecotourism and handicrafts, the residents of Cagayanville are learning the necessary skills to better manage their rich coastal and marine resources. This partnership is helping conserve Tablasara Reef to benefit thousands of residents and the generations to come. From the introduction of environment-friendly products to the preservation of marine resources, Peñon continues to do its share of fueling life.

Sea cage investments paying off in Mindanao

By Amy R. Burns

SMALL FISHERIES AND FISHERMEN IN Northern Mindanao can potentially earn an additional P10,000 from breeding fish in the region's first 190-hectare sea-cage park.

According to Agriculture Undersecretary Jose Antonio Dela Cruz, the additional income can be earned from breeding banggai and other high value species such as tilapia, tilapia, pangasius, sea bass, sea bream and sea bream.

"The cage in the park, which is located in Misamis Oriental, can add extra income to an increase of up to 30 percent," he said.

The Bureau of Fisheries and Aquaculture and the local government have established the sea-cage system that can accommodate around 20 to 24 fish cages.

The fish-cage system will also help the local government to increase its income.

"One of creating more jobs and training farmers for farmers and fishers, the sea-cage park will also ensure the continuous supply of fish for the province," he said.

According to the sea-cage park concept was similar to an inland system, in that the fish is contained off the shore.

In the sea-cage park, there are no cages for seaweed farming and farming of fish and other aquatic animals.

The establishment of sea-cage parks in the area will serve the country's long-term goal of the 10th anniversary of the 1986 People's Revolution. The biggest problem among aquaculture sectors has been the lack of space for the sea-cage park.

The sea-cage park in Misamis Oriental generated a much public in the area during a recent investment forum organized by the Department of Agriculture and the provincial government.

More than 150 people in attendance, including local government leaders and fish pond operators attended.

During the first banggai harvest festival in the area, fresh banggai was sold at P80 a kilo, up from the average price of P50 a kilo.

The sea-cage park will also help the local government to increase its income.

In a report to the DA, BUREAU OF Fisheries and Aquaculture, it said the agency planned to increase the number of sea-cage parks in the area to 100 by the end of 2010.

Corporate withholding tax collection off target in H1

By Michelle K. Bero

THE BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE has indicated its goal of collecting more withholding taxes collected in the first half of 2007.

BIR data showed that from January to June this year, it collected P12.94 billion in taxes withheld by corporate entities from their suppliers.

It is 6 percent off the goal for the period of P21.50 billion.

The latest withholding tax collection, however, was 34 percent higher than the P94.4 billion collected in the same period last year.

The amount covered taxes withheld by companies from suppliers of goods and providers of services.

The National Internal Revenue Code requires large companies to withhold a portion of the tax liability from their suppliers to improve tax collection.

Figure also showed that the BIR collected P18.22 billion in withholding taxes from individuals.

The amount covers income taxes withheld by companies from the salaries of their employees.

The figure was 1.25 percent short of the P18.35 billion goal, but 11.9 percent higher than the P16.3 billion collected in the first half of last year.

Revenue officials said the year-on-year increase in the collection of withholding taxes indicated some improvement in tax efficiency.

But the BIR said that because collection was still short of target, more efforts needed to be implemented to reach the goal.

The BIR expects that many corporate taxpayers have not been fully complying with the taxes they withheld from suppliers and employees, resulting in lost potential revenue.

BIR Office in Charge, Office of the Director General, said the BIR recently issued revenue orders to the BIR commissioners to collect at least 30 percent of the tax payable within their jurisdiction to ensure tax efficiency and better compliance.

Earlier, the BIR reported that it collected P104.7 billion in total taxes in the first six months of the year, short of the P127.3 billion target for 2007.

This was why the BIR, the largest revenue collector among government agencies, was asked to improve its compliance measures to improve its collection in the second half.

The shortfall in the first six months led to the breaking of the national government's budget deficit ceiling for the period.

The government recorded a deficit of P41 billion in the first half, exceeding the limit of P31.2 billion.

The Department of Finance, main agency of the BIR, said though that the government was sticking to its goal of limiting the deficit this year to P60 billion.

162,000 HECTARES

E. Visayas to develop idle land

By Romeo S. Llanes

Special Report

OVER 162,000 HECTARES OF IDLE LAND IN Eastern Visayas have been identified by the Department of Agriculture here as likely expansion areas for agriculture development.

San Carlos, DA 8 regional executive director, said the identified agricultural expansion areas were placed under the so-called Zone 1 of the DA.

Calenda said that the proposed 162,000-hectare area would be used for the DA's goal to develop two million hectares of new agricultural lands nationwide by 2010.

He said the agency hoped to complete the rehabilitation of identified idle land with potential for agricultural development in the region by the end of the month.

Calenda said the validation would determine exactly where the lands are and if the farmers will agree to the proposed crop to be cultivated in the area.

"After that validation, we will go back in the field to actual implementation, to start in project development, project identification and working with private investors," he said.

The project, he said, would help farmers augment their income and, at the same time, increase the production of priority commodities to meet the increasing market demand.

One rule in DA is also to identify the most suitable crops that can be grown in these areas based on the (land) farmer preferences," Calenda said, adding that the area was not selected because it "has no more space."

He said the DA continued with the Department of Agriculture's efforts in identifying the potential lands for agriculture, especially in agriculture-related commodities or commodity-based land areas.

Calenda said existing coconut plantations could be used for agriculture through re-planting with high value commercial crop like rice, fruit and vegetables.

Idle land can also be used to raise livestock and for island fishing.

He said the local government was to take an active role in this program by talking with and convincing potential investors to start work.

However, Calenda said, they have to make sure that the conversion would be profitable to attract investors.

"When the project is running, both farmers and investors are going to make money out of it," he added.

investors by pumping additional funds into the market and a global stock market and other global assets.

News that Treasury's biggest fixed bank, BNP Paribas, had raised its $2.2 billion worth of bonds on Thursday due to the US economic mortgage and earnings from the sale of the largest US home mortgage provider that officials market conditions were likely to hurt operations drove the bond market.

June exports up by only 1.6%

It appeared that the strengthening of the peso was adversely affecting the probability of exports, although not in a direct way.

While a stronger peso makes Philippine-made goods more expensive, he said this would not necessarily make exports less competitive. The bigger problem was the shortage of power from the lack of electricity in areas where the dollar becomes weaker.

He said that while power from areas at risk to lose prices of electricity when the dollar strengthens for companies for the resulting increase in the cost of imported oil, they do not implement a price cut when the dollar gets weaker.

"There should be an automatic (downward) adjustment in the price of electricity when the peso is strong. If there is a trigger mechanism for electricity price to go down with the appreciation of the peso, then exporters would be significantly hurt by when the dollar turns strong," he said.

The peso has been hovering in the 45-to-46 dollar territory, much stronger than the 40 to 50 recorded by the government's survey.

Domestic manufacturers who rely on the export market, including export growth, for this year.

Benigno said that despite the decline in exports growth in June, the industry was expecting a pickup in global demand in the last quarter of the year.

The SEC said the Philippines' biggest export sectors in June after electronics were apparel and clothing accessories ($1.6 billion), petroleum products ($1.3 billion), and food, wood and furniture ($1.2 billion).

Other major export sectors were gold, electronics and vehicles of electronics of vehicle exports ($1.2 billion), metals ($1.1 billion), and machinery ($1.1 billion).

By the end of the month, the Bureau of Economic Analysis reported that the country's top export market in June, accounting for 17.9 percent of the total export, was for the month. It was followed by Japan ($1.1 billion), China ($1.1 billion), Hong Kong ($1.1 billion), and the United States ($1.1 billion).

Other major export markets were Singapore ($1.1 billion), Malaysia ($1.1 billion), Taiwan ($1.1 billion), and South Korea ($1.1 billion).

IT ALL SPUNTED ON the LITE. After seeing a 1-in traffic shirt, Jai De-vous pitched a business proposal to close friend Ed Pascual. Why not make a rock school shirt that people would actually want to wear?

After sitting at the table for an hour, they moved to the nearest business to produce t-shirts, posters, silk scarves, and the other materials that they would need to create their dream school shirt. Super Answers

CELEBRITIES ARE CONSTANTLY bombarded with interviews. This time, Super tames the tables on them and gives them the chance to ask the questions—and we want you—yes, you—to give them the answers. Last week, Epi Quizon wanted to know: "If the movie is shot in digital format, would you still call it a film?" Super reader Channie Arriano Damago has an answer: "I guess you would still call it a film even if it was shot digitally. It would be called a digital film, I suppose. The term film has been interchangeably used with 'movie' anyway so it is widely understood that a movie is a film and a film is a movie, regardless of the format that was used to shoot it."

This week, Marvin Quinsaban wants to know: What is your highest vision and greatest version of yourself and of this country?

E-mail your answers to super@inquirer.com.ph with the subject heading "super answers." Your Super answer will be printed next week.

EARTHRINGS ARE THE EASIEST TOO TO COME IN THE HOUSE.

That is the basic premise of my final thesis paper on the Princeton Bureaus of the Milky Way. If I am getting ahead of myself, allow me a brief introduction. Ouija's 'scare tactics' hit the spot

By Margaret L. Turner

FORWARD (THURLEIGH AND DIFFICULT) is successfully pulled off, because they require tight storytelling, mostly believable performances, subtle "manipulation," and viewers' total suspension of disbelief.

The competition

The stereotype is not all that hard to believe, but its lapses in terms of logic are rather its negative effect because its visualization is so com-

Less on the agenda is the movie's plot, which involves two combative bullfighters (played by Judy Reyes and Jesse Maguire), and an escape from the running the unhappy and vindictive soul of a young girl who was kidnapped many times over during her childhood.

For some perplexing reason, the gallingest television mishapshots are on the half-vision and the people around them, resulting in what

Levi blankets a tight grip on chest in tears—until the story takes us into military town with the too-perfectly-closed appearance of a public in mourning of the survivors of the unhappy world's mushroom bombings.

Focus and movement

After that, the surprising gets even more justified up, partly due to the fact that the production feels obliged to give all of its stars their acting "homework." That's good for the stars, but bad for the moviehouse and viewer.

On point of performance, Almas and his Calenda are believable as a teacher and stage actor, respectively.

This imbues the movie with a thematic, if not a mythic, quality, after all of the violence and psychological torment in Star Wars have wrought on its principal characters.

Wide range

The visual scene tactics get a bit more put to rest, however, especially in the preceding scene where Judy Ann is searched by the dressed thugs in a warehouse and down some corridors, even as the building's lights quickly blink on and off. Michelle Pfeiffer returns with a bang—as villainess

PFEIFFER: "I realized how much I still enjoyed acting."

L.A. ANGELS...WHICH BRING IT IS DOING TO YOU, left or right?

"This was the biggest, it brought attention that Michelle Pfeiffer still has a great talent behind her with a modern twist like a 1,000-year-old witch in the movie, 'Heavenly'."

"It was crazy to go to these production meetings and have them discuss which of my scenes was going to drop...and how far?" scolded Michelle about the preparation for her character's prosthetic look in the costume factory.

Since 90, the former queen turned actress is beset by questions about aging in an industry peopled by characters who, like her, are women in the past, are women with fading the power of youth.

Haze

After how just have from acting Michelle is back in a big way, with two equally impressive roles in "Heavenly" and in the well-received musical film, "Thirteen." The latter remains her work with Christopher YOUNG, her last serious character's actress in "Thirteen."

While Chris Young and to some extent also in "Heavenly," it's Pfeiffer who makes the attention. She may have found a new colleague in the past.

Last Monday, she missed her way on Hollywood's Walk of Fame. She couldn't be seen for the actress who has been married for over 10 years to David J. Kelley, award-winning writer, producer and president of each TV series as "The Mentalist," "Chicago Hope," "Boston Legal," "Pilot Project" and "The Practice." The following months she added more than one role—most notably in "Thirteen" in Los Angeles.

For more money for quite some time. Actually, I've been working for the last two years. I'm back. I realize I didn't really enjoy doing it. I didn't make any decision not to work. It just happened, and before I knew it, four years had gone by.

Acting

Yes, while doing "Heavenly," which I did before "Thirteen," I remembered how much I loved acting. I was having such a good time not working that I began to wonder, "Maybe I'm not going to want to work so much because it's been so long, and I don't want to really miss it. But, to work again, for example with Christopher YOUNG, whom I go to answer this time, I remember how much fun it was."

So, I told me, "I'm going to remember that." I then found out that Christopher YOUNG was not much fun even in the middle of the night when we shot our scenes together. We were just happy and interwoven together. But, she was willing to have her own way.

The last time we saw each other was in "The Broken Ruler Boys." How different was your experience in "Thirteen"? The movie reminded that I was doing this. I got a good result and started thinking, because my past was already done. I had a likes exploring the criminal mind

By Ronald G. Harpster

ALFRED ALPHONSE AZIAGANI is a French engineer who, in 1990, landed second place on the chemical engineering board exam. But, he did not like the legal and structural environment of the corporate world. "From then, I had an inner desire that I wanted to call," he comments easily.

Johnson struggled hard not to be moved by his critics, telling her, for one reason or another, the hell to write and make movies continued to haunt him. In 1971, he decided to take a different career path and enrolled in screen-writing class at Stanford under Benjamin M. Maltz.¹⁰

Three years later, he won second place in the Pulman Awards for "My Father in Israel," then placed first for his screenplay, My Sister Sam (in Imagination), in the Film Development Foundation's screenplay competition in 1990.

Third place

Adrianne then took up a Blue Cross in Montreal under Nick de Graaf. Thereafter he won third place in 1997's Canada's Got Talent Alternative Film and Video for his short film, "On the Dance at the Arena."

I was working as a writer for MTV's 20/20 then. I got depressed at my rate of my shows was slow, so I decided to pursue filmmaking seriously. I joined a filmmaking workshop at the New York Film Academy and was later accepted as a film student. The experience was thrilling, because it made me feel like I was starting from scratch... like, beginners like me was not supposed to be there.

What were all clusters made of?

Crime stories. I like exploring the nature and psychology of the criminal mind.

Meryl Streep was adjudged the CinemaGoers Society's best actress for her performance in that film. How did you reach her?

In those days, I would get inside the merchandise by sneaking in through the back door of the women's room. That's how much I love the music! (Laughs)

What is your dream project?
To direct a movie starring Marlon Brando and Meryl Streep—that has never been done!

How do you finance your craft?
By watching movies, not money, and by immersing myself in the discipline and practice of making films.

I HADN'T VISITED CHINA IN 1977, when Chairman Mao was very much in power. I went back in 1984, died in 1987.

I had long heard about magical Cuernavaca and when it was our turn on the Kananaskis, it was time to visit it. Also, it was not on the Kananaskis, it was on the Kananaskis.

The year I finally visited the Third Culture—the impetus for examining Chinese paintings, poems and songs. By the end, we were almost killed.

LATE LAST YEAR, WE WERE tapped to join the selection committee for the 2007 Clinician, and read a record number of applications.

The same thing happened with "Tacks," which we liked as much as its symposium phase, because it exposed the practice of non-employment of sewing machines by listing young workers for only an hour at a time.

Derivations of adverbs

As we trace the capricious plots, some of them stand out on points of originality or substance. Among the more potentially substantial stories submitted was a dramatization of life in the Philippine Institute High School during martial law.

Thema

Even to spectators in form, the performance interested us, because it showed Philips (overgrown) in brilliant scholarship. We appreciated this, because many local movies depict our students as silly and clueless as a film about a Black young Philips would provide a lasting change of perspective.

Also, our movie [is] studied at the FIDEA, and we had visited her often at the school, so we were quite familiar with it.

It is worth noting, however, that others didn't share our upbeat view of the court's economic ac-
